DIVE SITES

The age of great discoveries isn't over yet! In the northern Red Sea, there are still many wrecks that have hardly been dived—the few who've been there agree—and the deep wrecks in the Suez Canal are absolutely amazing and the best Egypt has to offer in terms of wreck diving. Adrenaline, excitement, fascination, and uniqueness—that's wreck diving at its finest.

Description

The age of great discoveries isn't over yet!

In the northern Red Sea, there are still many wrecks that have hardly been dived—the few who've been there agree—and the deep wrecks in the Suez Canal are absolutely amazing and the best Egypt has to offer in terms of wreck diving. Adrenaline, excitement, fascination, and uniqueness—that's wreck diving at its finest.

They still exist: the great wreck adventures in the Red Sea. This tour features what are likely the least-dived wrecks in the Red Sea, and we also have other locations of rarely dived and unknown wrecks in our portfolio.

This tour is perfect for experienced divers who enjoy searching for and discovering new wrecks.

Requirements:

Some of the wrecks are only suitable for divers who are experienced in using stage tanks, twin tanks, and rebreathers and who hold the necessary certifications. A minimum of 150 dives is recommended. Independent diving in a buddy team is a prerequisite, as there is no direct dive leadership.

The following certifications are required to participate in this safari and must be verifiable:

- Advanced Nitrox

Route:

This tour is weather- and wind-dependent. In strong winds, some wrecks may not be accessible.
